MV Nordstjernen – 70 Years 1956 – 2026

For seven decades, the "Nordstjernen" has weathered calm seas and stormy nights, collected stories from generations, captured hearts worldwide, and won friends. In 2026, our "little star" will turn 70, and we want to embark on special voyages together with our wonderful passengers. Therefore, in September, we'll be heading west to new destinations. Even our departure port will be a premiere – for the first time, our nostalgic coastal voyage will begin in Bremerhaven. After a day at sea to relax and get acquainted with our "Stjernen," we'll reach the Solent in the morning and head for Portsea Island. Here lies the sheltered port city of Portsmouth, which has been the Royal Navy's most important naval base since 1194. Some of the world's most famous ships are moored in the historic shipyard, including HMS Victory, Admiral Nelson's flagship, and HMS Warrior, the first steam-powered ironclad battleship. We'll stay all day and continue our voyage in the evening. Sailing along England's stunning south coast, the "Jurassic Coast," we arrive the following day in Falmouth, a town eagerly awaiting our arrival. As we enter the harbour, said to be one of the finest natural harbours in the world, we see Pendennis Castle, built nearly 500 years ago, perched on a headland. We stay overnight here to fully enjoy this picturesque town and its surroundings on the southeast coast of Cornwall. Then it's on to a truly wonderful destination: the Isles of Scilly, an archipelago 25 nautical miles west of Land's End, a protected nature reserve renowned for its "outstanding natural beauty". Here we will anchor and be tendered ashore by small boats (weather permitting). Overnight, our Nordstjernen takes us to Fishguard, the only port in Wales on our voyage. The harbour master is delighted by our visit, and we can look forward to, among other things, a stroll past picturesque houses. Breathtaking coastal scenery and the warm hospitality of the approximately 3,000 inhabitants await us. In the evening, we leave Wales and set course for Avonmouth, the port of Bristol. Due to the large tidal ranges there, we have to be guided through the locks to reach our berth. Bristol embodies British flair and the English way of life, magnificent industrial buildings, maritime history, modern street art, and enchanting natural surroundings. In Bristol, we will encounter the works of the brilliant Victorian engineer Isambard Kingdom Brunel. The steam ship "Great Britain," which he designed, was the first modern transatlantic liner with screw propulsion and an iron hull. Our nostalgic coastal voyages are known for special destinations – so the next morning we'll head for the island of Lundy and anchor in the Bristol Channel (weather permitting). Let's be captivated by a breathtaking natural paradise with diverse wildlife and stunning beaches, as well as the charming Marisco Tavern, Lundy's only pub, which, much to the delight of the island's 28 or so inhabitants (and us!), is said to never close... Our next destination, Penzance, lies in Mount's Bay, a bay of the Atlantic Ocean. In England's southernmost and westernmost town, just 15 km from Land's End, beautiful gardens and Cornwall's only Victorian promenade, dating back to the 1840s, await us. Let's stroll the approximately 1.6 km between the famous seawater pool, the Jubilee Pool, and the neighboring village of Newlyn. Nearby is St. Michael's Mount, a small, tidal island reminiscent of an enchanted isle – a Cornish landmark. After a day full of experiences, we continue on to Dartmouth, where we will anchor spectacularly in the middle of the River Dart. This port city has played a vital role in Britain's maritime history. In 1620, the Pilgrims' ships, the Mayflower and the Speedwell, docked here for repairs before crossing the Atlantic to America. Perched on a hill overlooking the city is the Britannia Royal Naval College, where the Navy trains its cadets – past and present monarchs also received their basic training here. Let's enjoy Elizabethan streets, markets, beaches, galleries, and charming cafes. Sailing along the south coast of England, with its geological significance and over 200 million years of Earth's history, our Nordstjernen takes us overnight to the Isle of Wight. We visit Cowes, which has been home to international regattas since the founding of the Royal Yacht Squadron in 1815. Much of the town's architecture is still strongly influenced by the opulent style popularized by Prince Albert. Queen Victoria chose the island as her summer residence and stayed at Osborne House in East Cowes. In the evening, we leave the British Isles. Our first nostalgic coastal voyage to southern England is drawing to a close, and we set course for Bremerhaven, where we will arrive after another day at sea, filled with memories and experiences.

This voyage is a tribute to a ship that, for decades, has been far more than just a means of transport – it has touched people and shaped history. On board, we want not only to preserve memories but also to write new stories for the future. In doing so, we will show beyond the borders of Norway what an extraordinary ship our Nordstjernen is. Great Britain, with its long and proud seafaring tradition, has been and remains home to many historically significant ships. Our "Stjerna" is also a classic of maritime history, and we are delighted to be honored by the ports of southern England during these maiden calls as a symbol of nostalgic sea voyages and maritime heritage. Thank you, Nordstjernen! 70 years at sea – and in our hearts!

About our cabins:

The cabins aboard MV Nordstjernen reflect in size, style and furnishings the standards of the year of her construction, and are now even listed as historical monuments. All cabins (except cabin 304) are equipped with bunk berths (lower and upper berths). Cabins 204 to 209 still have the original furnishings from 1956, including dark woods and a small sofa, as they have never been remodeled. At approximately 5.5 square meters, the cabins may be quite small by today's cruise ship standards; our Category E interior cabins are even only the size of sleeping car compartments. There is no air conditioning on board, but every cabin has a fresh air supply. The portholes can be opened in ports. However, experience has shown that the cabins are only used for sleeping, as during the day, guests on the Nordstjernen spend time in the cozy lounges or outside. Luggage storage space is limited depending on the cabin category. If you don't find enough space for your luggage, the crew will be happy to store your suitcases. In the cabins aft, you must expect vibrations and noise from the engine and propeller, which, however, each passenger experiences differently.
